Thanks Catherine!

This is helpful, I will ask Dave Ward about the Evan's professor. I am submitting an abstract to the Salish Sea Conference (from the work Katy and I are doing). So hopefully I'll get to present our paper and make some more contacts.

I'm going to be talking with a social scientist at the Puget Sound Institute on Monday, she is pretty new there but her work is super related to what I'm proposing:

Unfortunately, she already told me that the funding she has must be spent by June but we are still going to chat since it seems like we may have a lot of shared research interests... You never know!

Hopefully see you tomorrow but if not, Merry Christmas!

Hi there! So good to see you.

Fyi, here's the PSI page I was talking about. <http://www.eopugetsound.org/articles/report-potential-effects-pbdes-puget-sound-and-southern-resident-killer-whales>

Andy James is the person I've worked with there. Also, Joel Baker (a little bit).

I think a lot of their funding goes through EPA, but they have a special appropriation- some excellent DC lobbying, I'd expect :)

I couldn't find the notes from the behavior presentation. But Dave Ward would be able to tell you who that Evans School professor was.

Take care,
Catherine

They realized that they had been looking differently at the same mountain, and, once they exchanged views with the common purpose of climbing to the mountaintop of truth, they developed a more complete understanding of the mountain than any of them had developed separately. They are still climbing and we do not know the end of the story. F.F. Wong
